Both the Bay St. Louis City Council and the Waveland Board of Aldermen have set special meetings regarding an interlocal agreement on a railroad speed limit lawsuit.

The Waveland meeting will be Monday at 7:30 p.m., City Clerk Arcelyn "Dee" Dastugue said.

She said the interlocal agreement remained the only item on the agenda late Friday.

The Bay St. Louis meeting will be 5:15 p.m. Tuesday and the agenda will include other business, Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr. said.

Franckiewicz also said he plans to ask the Hancock County Board of Supervisors for a resolution on the agreement at their Monday meeting, which begins at 9 a.m.

According to Franckiewicz, a meeting of city and county officials from across the Gulf Coast Tuesday resulted in a proposed interlocal agreement on how to fight a lawsuit by Chesapeake Seaboard X Transportation Inc., also known as CSX.

CSX is currently operating at 45 m.p.h. on a 90-day court order signed Thursday by Federal Judge Walter Gex III. The railroad is proposing limits of 50 and 60 m.p.h., depending on the type of cars being hauled.

Gex also granted a 90-day continuance for a hearing that had been scheduled for Thursday.

The suit, filed in federal court May 8, is asking that the railroad be allowed to increase the speed of its trains as they pass through Gulf Coast municipalities.

CSX originated the litigation after Jackson County refused to allow trains to go faster than five miles per hour on a 10-mile section of track outside Pascagoula.

On May 5, CSX Attorney Raymond Brown and Mobile Division Manager Dewey Moseley visited Waveland, which has the only local railroad speed limit ordinance in Hancock County, and asked the city to repeal its 35 m.p.h. limit.

Waveland refused, and subsequently was named as a defendant in an amended version of the suit.

The other defendants include Jackson County, Pass Christian, Long Beach, Gulfport, Pascagoula, Ocean Springs and Biloxi.

Bay St. Louis, which Franckiewicz said repealed its local speed limit ordinance in 1985 when the legislation originally allowing the railroad to pass through the city was cleared from the books, is not a defendant.

Neither is Hancock County, where there is no railroad speed limit ordinance.

Franckiewicz said he attended the meeting Tuesday because he feels Bay St. Louis should support action against higher speeds.

The interlocal agreement provides for joint funding of legal action in defense against the suit and for a single attorney for the entire group rather than individual attorneys for each city or county.

Under the agreement, Biloxi's attorney, Ron Peresich, will handle the suit under the guidance of a steering committee made up of attorneys for the other entities.

According to the mayor, this move will substantially reduce legal fees, which can be as high as $60 per hour for the individual attorneys or law firms involved.

A special trust fund will be set up to pay costs. He said local shares of the total costs will be about 1.39 percent for Waveland, 2.16 percent for Bay St. Louis and 4.16 percent for Hancock County, based on revenues.

Franckiewicz said the federal law the railroad contends supersedes the local speed limit ordinances is "being implemented badly."

In addition to fighting the suit in court, he said the group can handle the problem by relying on the state's somewhat limited power to regulate the railroads and to try to get the federal regulatory agencies to make changes in speed and safety regulations.

"We strongly feel that when the public safety is involved, we can't just wait to be sued," the mayor explained.

"We have to take an aggressive stance against the unreasonable speed the railroad is requesting, and we do feel that in the interests of safety it is an unreasonable speed. The railroad is trying to turn a few extra bucks at the expense of public safety."

"I think it's terribly important for the coast to present a united front to the railroad because it would be easy for the railroad to pick off each local ordinance one by one... No one city here is big enough to fight the railroad," he Franckiewicz said, adding that the agreement can be terminated only by a three-quarters majority of the 10 cities and three counties that will be included once formal resolutions are obtained.

Franckiewicz explained that at 60 m.p.h., a train has four times the energy it would have at 30 m.p.h., meaning that cars moving off the tracks during a derailment would go four times as far.

The energy rate of a train doing 45 m.p.h. is more than twice that of a train travelling at 30, he added.

Citing moderate speeds as 30 to 35 m.p.h., the mayor said, "I am reasonably sure that the railroad's right-of-way is wide enough to contain the physical damage a derailment might do at moderate speeds."

He pointed out that he was referring only to damage from cars hitting or landing on other objects and not to damage that might occur from a spill of a hazardous chemical.

He added that Bay St. Louis, Waveland and communities like Ansley, Lakeshore and Clermont Harbor are particularly affected by the possibility of hazardous chemical spills because water would block evacuations on one side and the tracks would block movement on the other side.

Hancock Humane Society supports new dogfight law

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Humane Society had agreed to provide monetary support for enforcement of a new law against dogfighting that will become effective July 1.

Barbara Jo Fitch, president of the society, said a reward will be offered to anyone who assists in the arrest and conviction of people involved in dogfighting.

"The Humane Society has long been aware of such cruel practices as dog and cock fighting and it is the intention of concerned members to cooperate with local law enforcement officers to stamp out this inhumane treatment of animals," she said.

"To this end, the Humane Society is prepared to offer an award of $500 to any person who assists in the arrest and conviction of persons engaged in such activities."

She also said the society urges all residents of the county to report such activities.

"Telephone calls can be made anonymously, of course. However, should anyone wish that his name be kept confidential, this confidentiality will be strictly honored," Fitch stated.

Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson said his department plans to enforce the new law as much as possible, but needs the assistance of citizens who can tell authorities when and where the illegal fights are taking place.

In addition to dogfighting, the law makes it illegal to bet or wager or promote betting or wagering on such fights. In addition, owning, training or transporting a dog with the intent of entering the animal in a fight is included.

The penalty for the offenses is a fine of not less than $1,000 or more than $5,000 or not less than one year but not more than three years in the state penitentiary.

Peterson said the new law makes it a felony to be a spectator at such a fight or when fight preparations are being made, as long as that person is there "with the intent to be present at such preparations" or "with the intent to be present at such exhibition."

The fine for that can range from $500 to $5,000 or a year of imprisonment or both at the discretion of the court.

The law also provides for confiscation of paraphernalia and animals involved with the stipulation that the animals be placed in custody of a veterinarian, local Humane Society, or animal welfare organization.

Also provided for is euthanasia of a dog that is not likely to survive until the disposition of the case provided certification of the animal's condition is obtained from a veterinarian.

Costs for these procedures and for care of confiscated animals shall be added to court costs.

The law further indicates that it places no prohibitions on use of dogs for management of livestock, lawful hunting, or any other purpose not prohibited by other laws.

Betting on other games or amusements that do not include dogfights is under the new law, punishable by fines of $5 to $500 or five to 20 days in jail.

Promoting or participation in fights between bears, foxes or animals other than dogs or tormenting or torturing such animals is considered a misdemeanor under the new law.

Waveland artist wins in St. Tammany show

Winners in the St. Tammany Art Association's 22nd annual Summer Show at the Delta Regional Prism Center in Covington, include Sandi M. Engelbrecht of Waveland who won the Richard Crosby Award for her Mixed Media work entitled "Max Is In Backyard..."

Pennington was very impressed with the fine quality of art that is on view from June 29 to July 17.

Pennington notes in his statement that "the two mainstreams of modern art surge with renewed intensity. The realistic urge is well represented in this show. Abstraction...has new life here and an elegant vibrancy." He also states that he has a "deep sense of excellence and a smile for the whimsical elements. Ever am I mindful that art elevates, amuses, and softens the edges of a harsh cruel world."

Farm trucks affected by new federal law

Farm pick-up trucks could come under the same commercial drivers' license standards as those of the major haulers of hazardous materials if present interpretations of the Federal Highway Administration are adhered to, according to Hugh Arant, president of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation.

Federal Highway Administration guidelines published in the Federal Register recently did not exempt commercial motor vehicles hauling agricultural products from its provisions.

The regulatory act defines a commercial motor vehicle as any vehicle, regardless of size or placarding requirements, that transports hazardous materials.

This would include millions of pick-up truck drivers, increasing the number of commercial licenses from 5.5 million to 11 million.

Arant said that farm pick-up trucks are not the problem, and that the farm organization is calling for an exemption from the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986 for Louisville Mayor Victor Frankiewicz and IAQC Mighty Mississippi Chapter President Liz Wilson. Ms. Wilson is also Chair of the 1987 Excellence in Mississippi Conference to be held in Jackson in October.

Lunch will be served at 11:30 a.m. with the program to follow at 12:30 p.m. Interested people are encouraged to come to the lunch or meeting, or both. For more information, contact Mario Giardino at (601) 668-1937.

farmers with farm plates on their trucks or who drive their trucks less than 15,000 miles per year.

State officials have expressed concern that if all vehicles transporting any non-excluded hazardous materials were covered by the requirements, state and local law enforcement agencies would have difficulty in distinguishing between vehicles carrying the exempt hazardous materials from the total number of hazardous commodities.

On June 11th the State of Mississippi gave birth to an innovative new venture. The dream of a few individuals came true.

October 1984—the year I took office, I called the director of Research and Development, Dr. James Meredith, and asked him to meet with officials at NSTL. It seemed that there wasn't any real working relationship between NSTL and the state other than the usual "permit" type communications.

Dr. Meredith and I sat around the conference table at NSTL with just a handful of people and talked about the needs of both NSTL and the State of Mississippi, wondering what we could do for each other that would help to strengthen our area and our relationships.

NSTL expressed their need as one of lack of space, additional room for expansion, housing for new branches of the many related activities that were already part of their family; space for new ideas, new business ventures to flourish and bloom. Mississippi's needs were ones of translating technology from NSTL into new high-paying jobs, a new tax base, access to the vast bank of knowledge that is available through the computer system's and personnel that are NSTL.

Dr. Meredith returned to Jackson, I came home to dream.

January 1985—the plan had been formulated for the Technology Transfer Center. The objectives—to provide needed space for new ventures at NSTL both for the federal and private sector to create new jobs and build good will. To build a bridge between NSTL and the State of Mississippi that would serve us both well.

The next step was to convince the Governor and the Legislature that we were on the right track.

The race was on.

Legislation was introduced in both House and Senate. Senator Gene Taylor from Hancock County engineered it through the Senate. But the Senate legislation died in the House Appropriations Committee. At that point all seemed lost, but where there is the will there is usually another way.

On a rare working Sunday, I offered an amendment to amend the Economic Development Appropriation to include funding for the Technology Transfer Center. With help from Pearl River and Hancock County Representatives, it was adopted and passed. Chairman Ed Perry and Senator Glen Dewease held our position tight on the conference committee. The legislation survived the process.

Trent Lott and John Stennis steered legislation through the national congress that was needed to gain permission to build on federal land. Nothing like this had ever been done before.

Sounds simple? What really made the difference? Your representative did their lobbying. Early in January I started talking with my colleagues one at a time, educating them to my objectives and getting commitments of support. During the floor action when they were needed, they were there.

When I think of the Technology Transfer Center, I will remember the remarks that Dave Sims, the editor of the Picayune Item wrote, "Some people think we have enough technology, but there are others who can see beyond it to breakthroughs we haven't imagined yet. They are the dreamers, and they hold the keys to the future."

The future will spring from places such as the Technology Transfer Center. Mississippians will be part of it, as the technology flows out to private business which in turn will find the markets and create the jobs."

The building we accomplished collectively by the team, but my dream follows the philosophy of Henry Ford: "Find a need and fill it."

Leaders must be dreamers. They must have vision beyond just today. I am proud of my part in this dream, a vision that now has become a reality.

Proven leadership, experience and ability are needed in your District 47 Senate Seat. I know by the track record that I have and that I offer you PRO"EN PERFORMANCE.

Handicapped parking law to take effect

BY DENA BISNETTE

A new state law making it illegal for a nonhandicapped driver to park in a space reserved for the handicapped takes effect on July 1.

According to Waveland Police Chief Donald Dorn, local authorities will be able to enforce the new law on public property or on private property at the owner's request.

Public property includes city and county facilities. Some private property, such as shopping centers, already has parking spaces marked with wheelchair signs designating them as being reserved for handicapped drivers.

The new law makes unauthorized use of a handicapped parking space a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $100.

State law also allows any physically handicapped Mississippi resident to obtain a parking certificate and license plate decal bearing the wheelchair design used as the international symbol indicating that handicapped facilities are available.

The decals are issued through the State Tax Commission with other car tag decals and applicants must submit a physician's affidavit stating what his particular handicap is. The law specifies that the handicap must be of such a nature as to require the person "to permanently or indefinitely use a wheel chair or crutches in lieu of or to assist in walking."

Port Commission accepts lift station proposal, sets committee meeting

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission has accepted a bid for testing and maintenance of sewage lift stations at Port Bienville Industrial Park, Stennis Airport and Bayou Cadet.

The commission voted at a special meeting Monday to accept a proposal from Zee Brown, whose firm provides the same services for Diamondhead.

The contractor will provide daily testing and preventative maintenance at all three locations for about $600 per month.

The proposal was one of two submitted.

Also on Monday, the commission agreed that its budget committee—which consists of Chairman Ronald Artigues, Executive Director Harold Olsen and Commissioners David McDonald and Nancy Gex—will meet June 31.

The entire commission will meet to discuss the budget during the week of July 6-11, Olsen said. The most likely date for a meeting was apparently Thursday, July 9, but was not confirmed.

Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation

By Ed Blake

MODERN METHODS SAVE FRUIT

This year March in Mississippi may have come in like the proverbial lamb, but its exit was more like a polar bear than a lion—and scores of Mississippi fruit and vegetable growers were put to the test in order to spare early crops from record-breaking low temperatures that blew in out of Canada March 30-31.

The biggest threat to Mississippi farm crops probably occurred in the Meridian area where about 500 acres of peaches are grown in south Lauderdale and north Clarke counties.

Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation representatives were on hand in that area for two nights as the end-of-March chills penetrated the beautiful hills of east central Mississippi causing a technological drama to unfold during the evening and early morning hours of an agricultural, history-making nature as it was proven that modern methods can save fruit crops from late freezes.

At the Lamar and Priestly Taylors' 200 acre peach orchard on Highway 45 five miles south of Meridian, helicopters were used to stir the air as the temperatures dropped into the sub-freezing zone that normally, probably would have killed a high proportion of newly set fruit on the trees.

Priestly Taylor is president of the Mississippi Peach Growers' Association and vice president of the Lauderdale County Farm Bureau. He is a third generation peach grower in his area. His grandfather first set out peach trees on the family-owned property for home use long before his namesake grandson was born.

Priestly Taylor's father, Lamar, was, in his own words, "born and raised in peaches here in Lauderdale County." When the elder Taylor, now in partnership with his son, and his brother Leonard got out of school, their father, N.P. Taylor, increased the family acreage from 25 acres to about 90 acres. In those days he hauled them to market in a touring car before upgrading his transportation to a pick-up truck.

Today the father and son grow about 200 acres of peaches along with cattle, corn, hay, tomatoes and cantaloupes.

They operate three peach marketing stands on Highway 45 South, Highway 19, and near the Mall in Meridian. They retail over half of their production at these three sites. Too, they pioneered in utilizing peach washing and waxing devices to enhance the shelf life of their graded fresh fruit sold to city markets in the South as well as that at night they set afire the piles of auto tires which burned until dawn and after.

The result of their vigilance and modern methodology paid off, it appears. Preliminary examination of the young fruit on April 1 and 2 revealed that probably 85 to 90 percent of the crop was saved. And in this case, the small percent of lost fruit would have been eliminated anyway by thinning to improve the quality of the overall peach crop.

This exercise in modern methods that was used to prevent crop freezing is significant in that it may be the first time it has been used in Mississippi. It becomes more significant in view of County Agent Bobby Sims statement that in 1985 freezes in Mississippi not only greatly cut back the 1985 crop but even killed peach trees in north Mississippi.

Freezes a year ago likewise wiped out practically the entire Mississippi peach crop.

Sims said peaches are the fourth largest farm income producer in Lauderdale County, with only timber, beef cattle, and truck crops in that order exceeding peaches in total harvest value.

Other Lauderdale and Clarke County peach growers were not so lucky. Mrs. Woodrow Moffet, whose late husband developed Peachridge Farms, approximately 100 acres of peaches a few miles south of Taylor's orchards, reported that their orchards were harder to protect because of their location over a wide area that made it difficult for them to effectively use fires to raise orchard temperatures. After the freezes were over she reported the situation was "not too good".

Yet even lower temperatures had been forecast for the next night, and before nightfall, March 31, the Taylors had a second helicopter hauled in from Greenwood ready for action. That night they again monitored the orchard temperatures. During the day they

Quotables by Cuevas '99

Many folks are now making plans for the big July 4 weekend.

There will be quite a few events taking place in the area for the celebration.

One of the big events for the area is the 39th Mississippi Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo with headquarters at the Robert L. Rice Pavilion in Gulfport.

Local fishermen are preparing their boats and tackle, checking favorite fishing spots and anxiously awaiting July 2.

Fishing registration is free and there are many big prizes in fresh and salt water categories.

There are many fishermen out there who would like to break some of the rodeo records and will be trying very hard.

Good luck to all fishermen.

In Bay St. Louis, the 3rd Annual Crab Festival is on tap for July 3, 4, & 5.

The event will be held at the intersection of U.S. 90 and Beach Boulevard.

One of the specialties of the Crab Festival will be a large variety of foods. And of course there will be boiled crabs, live entertainment, fireworks on Saturday night and many other events at the very popular festival.

St. Rose de Lima Catholic Church's 61st Annual Church Fair will also be held on July 4 & 5 in Bay St. Louis.

The fair too will offer many events and some very good foods along with live entertainment, a softball tournament and even a style show.

The fair will be held on the school grounds across from St. Rose de Lima Church on Necaise Avenue.

Geraldine Lang, general fair chairman said, they are also expecting a number of state and local political hopefuls to drop by on Saturday and Sunday.

In Hancock County there will also be neighborhood boat parades and other activities.

Sometimes I think it is a shame so many things happen on one weekend, as a person finds it hard to visit every event they would like too.

It is hoped everyone will have a good and safe holiday weekend.

Officials and residents have shown a big concern about our seawall in Hancock County for many years.

We can remember the seawall suffering severe damages from many storms back to the one in 1947.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers are now doing a shore protection study and reports indicate the study will not be completed until March of 1989.

This does appear to be a lengthy period of time, but when dealing with nature, a lot of information has to be gathered.

The Beach Road is in bad shape and each wind or rainstorm continues to deteriorate the well-travelled roadway.

No matter what type of shore protection is built, there probably will always be some road maintenance needed.

We are glad to see the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers study underway and will be happy when it is completed, and then will look forward to the completion of the projects.

Shore protection is a big project and it will take time and a lot of dollars.

Like everyone else, we will be happy when a solution is found and in place.

NO GARBAGE BARGE!

Deadline nears for voter registration

Mississippians have one sure way to voice their opinions on who will be the next governor of this state and on who will provide leadership in all areas of government. They can vote.

The deadline to register to vote for the first primary is July 3, 30 days prior to the Aug. 4 election. Runoff elections will be held Aug. 25 and the general election is set for Nov. 3.

The governor's race heads the ballot, but a number of other state and local government races also should be of interest to voters. The races include state offices, legislative seats, and county supervisor posts.

In the governor's race, eight Democratic candidates and two Republican candidates are vying for an address at the Governor's Mansion. Gov. Bill Allain, the first governor in this century eligible for back-to-back terms, decided against another run for the office.

The Democrats seeking the office are Maurice Dantin, John Arthur Eaves, Gilbert Fountain, Ray Mabus, Ed Pittman, Mike Sturdivant, H. R. Toney and Bill Waller. Republicans Doug Lemon and Jack Reed also are seeking the state's highest office.

The governor's race should attract a large number of voters to the polls. Mississippi has more than 1.6 million registered voters.

In the 1983 governor's race, 752,737 voters cast ballots in the general election. The largest turnout was in the Democratic first primary, when 828,211 voted.

Registering to vote is a simple process—requiring only a trip to City Hall or the County Courthouse and a Social Security number.

Once registered, voters should take some time to study the candidates and the issues, and then make the trip to the polling place on election day.

Voting is the way every Mississippian can have a say in how this state is run. But if you don't register to vote, you lose the right to have that say.

News from

Governor Bill Allain

By now, you have probably read or heard press accounts of a news conference I recently held to explain my reasons for not seeking a second term as Governor of Mississippi. As I told the reporters, there is no singular reason why I chose not to run again.

A lot of my decision resulted from my strong belief that a campaign against a sitting governor at this time of steady, but slow, economic recovery would have been detrimental to the state.

Rather than having candidates trying to criticize the accomplishments we have made in four years and the on going programs we are supporting, I believe the people of Mississippi should be hearing candidates who propose solutions to the problems of the future.

I cannot explain to many of you why I did not run. I wish I could sit down with everyone who encouraged me to run, even to the final hours of the final day of qualifying.

The people of Mississippi have been very supportive and encouraging of me during these four years. And for that and for the opportunity to serve as your Governor, I will always be thankful.

Let me assure you that I intend to be Governor for the next six months, just as I promised you in 1983. I will be travelling around Mississippi, visiting with you and hearing your concerns for the future of Mississippi.

This type of contact with the people of our state is one of the most enjoyable parts of being your Governor.

We have several very important projects pending in this time, and I hope to have them well underway before I leave office in January. One of these projects is the multi-billion dollar super collider that the State of Mississippi will be applying for later this summer.

I intend to continue promoting the need for Constitutional reform in Mississippi because we need to update our 1890 Constitution to deal with today's problems.

I hope the candidates for Governor this year are asked about their stands on a Constitutional convention.

Overall, I like being Governor. We have accomplished many things during our Administration, with your help. We have made gains in economic development, where we gained 83,000 jobs and the unemployment rate dropped three points.

We have made gains in the employment and appointment of thousands of Mississippians who had never had a voice in government before.

We have reorganized state government to create a stronger Governor's office for the person who follows us.

There is much work to do. I pledge to you that I will be around in some capacity after this term to help do that work.

KIDNEY STONES

Q: Recently, I suffered from severe pain that was diagnosed as being caused by kidney stones. How do kidney stones form, and is surgery the only treatment?

A: Most kidney stones are idiopathic, that is, physicians are not able to attribute them to a specific cause. However, doctors do know that a variety of metabolic disorders play a part in the formation of kidney stones.

People who have chronic kidney infections are likely to have large stones, and the bacteria causing the infection may reside within the stones. Additionally, some geographical areas could be considered "stone belts." In comparison to the rest of the country, certain parts of Massachusetts and the Carolinas have a more frequent occurrence of reported cases of kidney stones.

Physicians believe that dehydration contributes to the formation of stones. When kidneys produce low levels of urine, they seem to precipitate crystals, which collect to form stones.

Physicians recommend for patients who have a tendency to produce kidney stones to drink one, 10- to 12-ounce glass of water before each meal and, between meals, because prevention is the best treatment.

Until the 1970s, surgery was frequently necessary for people unable to pass kidney stones with their urine. Today, new techniques offer alternative therapies.

A relatively new procedure for removing kidney stones, which was developed in Germany, has received a lot of publicity, but it is available at few medical centers in the U.S.

In this procedure, the patient is given a spinal or general anesthetic and placed in a large bath containing a special machine that produces shock waves.

These invisible waves help break the stones into tiny fragments. Later, the patient passes the fragments with his urine. The procedure involves an expensive unit, costing more than $2 million, and some large stones can't be treated by the unit, so this method of treating kidney stones is unlikely to be available at many hospitals.

A revolutionary new technique used successfully in treating both young and old patients with small and large kidney stones, percutaneous renal surgery, has become an increasingly popular procedure. It doesn't require expensive equipment, and most hospitals already have the necessary technology.

In contrast to open surgery, performed in an operating room on a patient under general anesthesia, percutaneous renal surgery can be done under a local anesthetic in a radiology laboratory.

Using a fluoroscope, a radiologist locates the kidney stones and establishes a temporary tract into the kidney by way of a tube through the skin. A physician then dilates the tract with a balloon catheter, and then inserts instruments through the tube into the kidney to grab and pull out the stones. When the tube is removed, generally in 24 to 48 hours, most patients are completely healed.

In percutaneous renal surgery, all manipulations are done without open surgery so patients may sometimes avoid the risks of general anesthesia, require a shorter hospital stay, and recuperate more quickly. At major medical centers, such as the University of Mississippi Medical Center, where the procedure has been performed for nearly two years, physicians have been able to remove kidney stones without resorting to surgery. Some physicians predict that conventional kidney stone surgery soon will be obsolete.

Many stones in the kidney do not require treatment. Others will pass through the urinary passages spontaneously if given time.

When shock wave machines become widely distributed, approximately 80 percent of stones which might have been removed surgically in the past will be treated with shock waves, 15 percent by percutaneous technique and only 5 percent by conventional surgery.

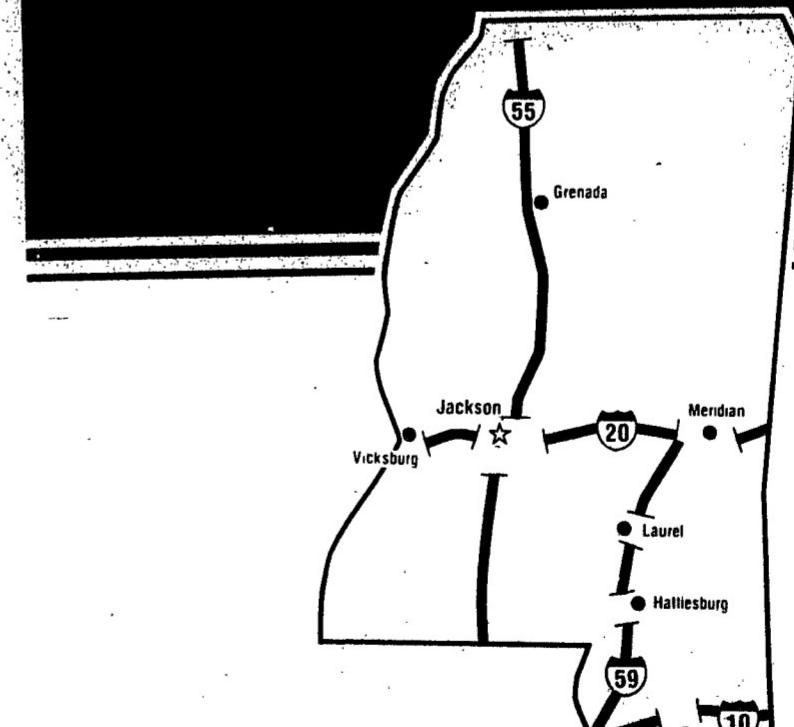

Since 1980, percutaneous renal surgery has been available as an effective alternative to open surgery for many people with kidney stones.

County Agent's Notes

By Lee Taylor

MISSISSIPPI STATE—Specialists at Mississippi State University are going all-out to help producers of the state's largest crop make ends meet in 1987.

With spring planting around the corner, officials are renewing efforts to bring profits to soybean growers. Soybeans are the state's largest planted crop, with 2.6 million acres seeded in 1986.

But acreage of the crop is expected to reach only about 2 million acres this year as farmers face an uphill battle with soybean profits.

Dr. Wayne Jordan, head of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Agronomy Department, said the main reason for low profits is a combination of high production costs, low yields and low prices.

"When you consider that the average per bushel cost of producing soybeans is more than $6 and the price is below $5, it's not hard to see why soybean farmers are discouraged."

Jordan and other Extension specialists are working to recommend practices farmers can follow to survive this year.

"The emphasis has to be on improving efficiency in growing soybeans," Jordan said. "Most Mississippi soybean farmers can make some changes that will improve their efficiency in production and harvesting."

Jordan said farmers need to look at ways to lower production costs without reducing yields and methods to increase yields without increasing costs.

"Each time a farmer reduces costs by $5 per acre, he reduces the per bushel costs by 20 cents," Jordan said. "Each practice used to increase yield one bushel per acre also reduces the cost about 20 cents per bushel."

To help farmers make sure they cover all angles in cutting costs and boosting yields, Extension specialists have produced a 30-minute video tape outlining specific practices farmers can use.

The tape is available in VHS format, the format used in home video cassette recorders. The tapes are being made available to soybean growers in Mississippi free on a check-out basis. Growers can check out a copy of their local county Extension offices.

A publication accompanies the video tape. The publication goes into more detail on the production practices recommended for this year.

The sound track of the video tape is available on audio cassette for farmers to use in their trucks, automobiles or in their homes. The cassette also can be checked out free at the county Extension office.

For farmers who want to keep all the materials, the video cassette can be bought at cost for $7. The audio cassette costs $2.

Jordan said the goal is to put the materials in the hands of every soybean farmer in the state. The materials are available at county Extension offices beginning March 27.

Initially, 300 video cassettes in the VHS format, 200 audio cassettes and 15,000 publications will be produced in the effort. Eighty-two copies of the program will be produced in the Betamax format for use with video equipment in county Extension offices.

The project is possible by special funding from the Mississippi Soybean Promotion Board.

COOKED BLACKTOP—A City of Bay St. Louis barricade protects an area of Beach Boulevard near McDonald Lane damaged by a fallen high powerline during an electrical storm Wednesday evening. Patrolman Roy Shubert said when he arrived at the scene, flames were up to 10 feet high as the hot power line bounced on the roadway. Even though it was during a heavy thunderstorm, Bay St. Louis firefighters had to douse water on the road to cool it down. City worker Sam Dorsey placed barricades around the area until crewmen were able to remove the cooked blacktop and make repairs. about $77,000. The board has been asked to provide an additional $66,000 for the second year of the study, which the supervisors hope will eventually lead to $12 million in federal grant funds. ### Cochran sponsoring disaster bill

Senator Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) is sponsoring legislation to improve federal disaster assistance to communities and residents victimized by natural disasters.

The bill would authorize from $15 million to $20 million in additional federal funding and improve delivery of disaster assistance to communities struck by floods, tornadoes, hurricanes and other natural catastrophes.

"Judging from our experiences in Mississippi and elsewhere in the nation," Cochran said, "there is a real need to improve the federal disaster assistance program.

"When people and their communities are suffering in the wake of a natural disaster, there should be a minimum of red tape and a maximum of prompt delivery of available services and funds to the victimized area," he commented.

The legislation would also include several provisions recommended by state and local emergency management officials around the country to address problems arising in the federal disaster assistance programming authorized in the bill would be "a small price to pay for making vitally-needed improvements in federal efforts to assist areas battered by floods, tornadoes, hurricanes and other natural disasters."

The bill also includes provisions of a Senate amendment adopted last fall to the highway bill mandating a minimum of 75 percent federal cost sharing for damage to public facilities in areas hit by natural disasters.

One-call service locates utility lines

Backyard gardeners or those involved in major construction work may call the Mississippi One-Call Center to get underground utility lines located before digging.

The non-profit One-Call Center has computerized records of buried gas, water, telephone, sewer and cable television lines of member companies and municipalities.

"Cutting underground utility lines can be dangerous, expensive and at the very least, inconvenient," said Sam Johnson, center administrator.

"Because we have records on so many kinds of underground lines, calling us is quick and easy," he added.

The Center personnel will check the records and notify all member companies with underground facilities near a digging site that the lines need to be located and marked.

The service is free of charge, and the Center serves the entire state.

Johnson encouraged contractors and others to call as soon as they know when and where they'll be digging. "The earlier we're called, the faster the lines can be located and marked," he concluded.

Free CPR instruction offered through summer

By EDGAR H. PEREZ

A young Bay St. Louis couple, both emergency medical service personnel, is offering courses this summer to the general public on cardio pulmonary resuscitation.

Sam Wilkinson, who works with the East Baton Rouge Parish (La.) ambulance service, and his wife Heidi, employed by a Slidell, La. ambulance company, have volunteered their services as instructors for the courses.

The instruction, recently modified by the American Heart Association, is being offered through the summer on Tuesday nights at Loliacano's Health Club in Bay St. Louis.

Course hours are from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. with enough information offered in one two-hour session to qualify participants for certification by the Heart Association, according to Sam Wilkinson.

The recent modifications to the course include dividing sessions on CPR administration to adults from the course on applying the procedure to children.

The course on administering CPR to children is taught on the last Tuesday of the month, Wilkinson noted.

Previously, CPR was taught in two four-hour sessions, but retention of the material by those participating fell below an acceptable level, Wilkinson pointed out.

Revising the basic course into one two-hour session has proved much more practical, Wilkinson added.

"By keeping the enrollment to 12 or less each session, we are able to complete hands-on and written tests required for the certification within the two hours," the instructor stated.

Although the instruction is offered free of charge, reservations are required in order to keep the number in each class at a workable number.

Reservations can be made by calling the health club at 467-2669.

"We started out with the intention of getting all of our employees at the health club certified in CPR," said

J. E. Loliacano of Bay St. Louis, club owner.

"But after talking to Sam and Heidi we decided to make our aerobics room available so that the courses could be offered to the community," Loliacano added.

"CPR is one of those things you hope you will never have to use, but it is also a source of great satisfaction to know you are trained and capable of saving someone's life in an emergency situation," Loliacano said.

Wilkinson noted CPR is indicated in most cases of cardiac arrest, electric shock, drowning, drug overdose, suffocation and severe allergic reaction.

"CPR can save a life in any situation where there is evidence of no breathing or no pulse or neither one," Wilkinson added.

"I have been trained in CPR several times," Loliacano said.

"and it has meant a lot to me on more than one occasion."

"It's a good feeling to know you are trained to handle an emergency whether it be at home or in any situation you may find yourself," Loliacano added.

While there are no dues or fees for the course, there is a $1 charge for the textbook "Heartsaver Manual" published by the American Heart Association.

Three of the well-known CPR mannekins known as "Resuscitators" are being used for the courses at the health club, borrowed from the Gulf Coast Emergency Medical Services District headquartered in Gulfport.

"We are making the space available, but Sam and Heidi are putting a great deal of time, talent and effort into this project, so we hope as many people as possible will take advantage of this opportunity to receive invaluable training at no cost," Loliacano said.

Manieri-Welch

Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church was the setting for the May 22 marriage of Kim Darlene Welch and Gerald C. Manieri, both of Bay St. Louis. The Reverend Johnny Planea celebrated a candlelight Nuptial Mass and officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Welch. The groom's parents are Bobbie C. Manieri and the late Donald C. Manieri Sr. Grandparents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ducharme of Ontario, Ca. and the late Mr. and Mrs. Prince J. Ledner. The groom is the grandson of Mrs. Emma Coleman of Bay St. Louis and the late Robert H. Coleman and the late Mr. and Mrs. Sidney A. Manieri Sr.

Arrangements of white gladioli and palm greenery adorned the altar, while candleabra were decorated with fern and white ribbons. Glowing candelabra marked the aisle.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. John McKenna, organist, and John Mason, soloist.

The bride chose for her wedding a formal gown of white organza and chantilly lace with sweetheart neckline outlined with re-embroidered lace, fitted bodice adorned with pearls and iridescent, and lace banded puffed sleeves. Bands of lace encircled the full bouffant skirt and bordered the hemline and chapel length train. She wore a headpiece fashioned of silk florets interspersed with pearls with side profile spray, which held a veil of silk illusion.

She carried a sweeping cascade of white roses, needlepoint ivy, red sweetheart roses, jubilee gyp and pearls.

Mrs. Cheri Swartzendruber of Oklahoma was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Linda Cool, aunt of the bride; Dawn Sacket and Kinta Ladner, cousins of the bride,

all of Bay St. Louis.

Donna Manieri and Jo Ellen

Manieri, nieces of the groom, were miniture bride and flower girl, respectively.

The attendants were attired in red silk taffeta gowns, each with sweetheart neckline, ruffled puffed sleeves, fitted bodice and full circular skirt. They carried cascades of white silk roses, blossom spray, red baby's breath, jubilee gyp and lace with pearl sprays.

Ricky Manieri of Waveland served his brother as best man.

Groomsmen were Donald C. Manieri Jr. of Bay St. Louis and Dennis Manieri of Waveland, brothers of the groom, and Danny Welch of Bay St. Louis, brother of the bride.

Les Sacket Jr. and Steve Warren, cousins of the bride, were miniture groom and ring bearer, respectively.

Ushers were Bill Warren and Tommy Cool of Bay St. Louis, cousins of the bride.

Mrs. Welch chose for her daughter's wedding a teal green dress with princess styling and basque waistline. The sweetheart neckline featured a deep V-back and ruffled trim accented the sleeves.

The groom's mother was attired in a floor length mauve crepe dress with matching chiffon overlay.

A reception followed the ceremony at the American Legion Post 139 in Bay St. Louis.

The couple resides in Long Beach.

In coastal gardens

By John E. Davis
Area Horticulture
Specialist, MOES
Your home landscape is complete.

Attractive shrubbery surrounds the house. Stately trees provide cooling shade in the back yard living areas.

An ornamental tree provides an interest accent on the front lawn. The grass is lush and green, completing the picture. Yet, something is missing. The frame. And what better frame than beds and borders of flowering annuals.

A border of "Steady Red" geraniums can line the driveway from the street to the garage. What better way is there to say "welcome" than with a colorful edging of zinnia "Pulcino" at the shrubs by the front door?

Trees, the mailbox or the light post can be accented with a colorful collar of "Super Elfin" impatiens.

Baskets can spill over with begonia "Avalanche" or geranium "Red Fountain". Tubs and other containers of petunia "Purple Pirouette" or one of the "Supercascades" can put the finishing touch to the patio, deck or pool.

Annuals can find a happy home anywhere you can find the space to plant them. They can stand on their own, be an integral part of a flower garden with perennials and roses, or bring cheerful color to the shrub border or foundation plantings. The only limits are the size of your garden and your imagination.

The colors you choose for your flower beds and borders reflect the mood you wish to convey. Looking for an exciting, attention-getting garden?

If so, plant it in warm tones of yellow, orange and red, choosing from geranium "Red Express"; orange, coral or red "Supernagic"; petunias; golden and yellow marigolds; orange calendula; "Carabinieri Scarlet" salvia or "Yellow Marvel" zinnia.

On the other hand, if you want your garden to be quiet and soothing in effect, plant blue and violet shades of ageratum; petunia "Sugar Daddy", "Blue Lace", "Blue Magic" or "Royal Cascade"; blue and violet pansies; or impatiens "Super Elfin", "Twilight" or "Mini Violet".

Know, too, that some plants are known for the color of their foliage and not their flowers. Silver and grey tones of dusty miller make it a useful filler or edging to tie several components together.

For an all white garden, combine it with nicotiana "Nicki White", impatiens "Super Elfin White" or "Mini White" or petunia "Supercascade White".

The bright red, green, rose, yellow, black or ivory markings of coleus make it the plant choice to brighten up a dark, shady corner.

Eye catching "Wizard", "Rainbow" or "Carefree" coleus mass effectively while the "Fiji" with its fringed leaves and the "Dragon" series with its serrated leaves add an additional intriguing look.

Flowers of the ornamental pepper are insignificant, but the colorful fruits that change in color from yellow or cream through orange to bright red are out of the ordinary and distinct. Use them as a low border plant, especially where heat and drought tolerance is a must. The fruits are edible, too, but beware!

Whether the rounded "Holiday Cheer", the cone shaped "Fireworks", the tapered "Red Missile" or the "Holiday Flame", they are exceptionally hot!

Match the height of your flowers to their surroundings and keep the two in proportion. Where taller plants can be used, select from zinnia "Yellow Marvel"; African marigolds; or nicotiana "Nicki" in white, green, or shades of red and pink.

For the middle of the border, salvia "Carabinieri", multiflora petunia "Cherokee Improved" or "Comanche", "Super Elfin" impatiens in fifteen shades or geranium "Steady Red", a double flowered type that does not shatter, can't be beat. In smaller areas and as low borders, try the "Mini" impatiens, ornamental peppers, "Calypso Mix" portulaca or zinnia "Pulcino".

The last step in the planning stage is to fit your flower garden to its environment. Sun or shade? If shade is the answer, stick to coleus, impatiens, or begonias. In a half shade situation, use nicotiana "Nicki Mix" or salvia "Carabinieri". Moist soil? Plant salvia "Carabinieri" or "Super Elfin", "Mini", "Twinkle", "Ripple" or "Rosette" impatiens.

Food for fitness

Low-calorie meals can still be tasty

MISSISSIPPI STATE—Fitness has become a very popular term in recent years as more and more people are conscious of their health and weight.

But dieting is not necessarily synonymous with fitness. Fitness is a total program of good health habits, good nutrition, regular exercise and rest and stress control, according to Nelda Starks, a nutrition education specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"The focus on eating for fitness should be on nutrient dense foods, in other words those foods that are highest in nutrients with lower calorie content," she said. "Your diet can be a creative challenge by substituting nutritious foods for snacks and desserts high in calories but low in nutrients."

There is no need to eliminate any one food group or resort to mundane meal plans. In fact, a balanced diet must include foods from all the food groups—milk and cheese, fruit and vegetables, breads and cereals, meats and meat alternate foods (eggs, peanut butter, dried beans and peas). Food should also be served in an attractive manner to be appetizing.

There are several methods for preparing foods that can satisfy hunger without eating too many calories. For instance, for dessert lovers, think about recipes that incorporate air into egg white and/or dessert topping to give the illusion of less calories.

Fruit and yogurt desserts are also good dessert choices for weight watchers.

Main-dish casseroles can also be altered to reduce calories by extending food with beaten egg whites. This results in a generous serving with a minimum of calories. Also think in terms of extending high-fat protein foods with vegetables and dried beans or peas (legumes).

Fresh fruits and vegetables are natural calorie minimizers. They are low in calories, exceptionally nutritious and can be prepared in a variety of ways. The microwave oven offers additional methods of preparing these to conserve nutrients since microwave cookery requires less cooking time and less liquid.

Starks provided the following recipes that use these principles for reducing calories. Since they are designed for the microwave, they are good choices for the busy cook.

Frozen Fruit Salad

(40 calories per serving)
1 package (10 ounces) frozen sweetened strawberries or raspberries

3 ripe bananas, mashed
1 can (8½ ounces) crushed pineapple, in juice, undrained
2 cups plain low-fat yogurt

Place berries in 2-quart glass bowl. Microwave on High uncovered for 2½ minutes or until thawed, stirring twice.

Stir in bananas and pineapple. Fold in yogurt until well blended. Line muffin pans with paper liners. Fill ¼ full with fruit mixture. Freeze until firm, about 3 hours. To serve remove papers and garnish with a cherry, if desired. Yield: about 24 fruit cups.

Almond Mocha Souffle

(122 calories each)
1½ cups skim milk
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
2 teaspoons instant coffee granules

½ cup sugar
1½ tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
4 eggs, separated
1 envelope (1½ ounces) reduced calorie whipped topping mix

1 teaspoon almond extract
Combine milk, gelatin and coffee

granules in 4-cup glass measure. Let stand 2 to 3 minutes or until softened. Add sugar and cocoa; mix well. Microwave on High, uncovered, 4½ minutes or until steaming hot. Beat egg yolks slightly in small dish. Beat in small amount of hot milk; return mixture to 4-cup measure, mixing well.

Microwave on High, uncovered, 1½ minutes or until mixture begins to bubble around edge, stirring 2 or 3 times. Beat well. Refrigerate until mixture mounds, about 1 hour. (If mixture sets up too much, beat until smooth.)

Beat egg whites in 2-quart glass mix 'n' pour bowl until stiff peaks are formed. Using the same beaters, prepare dessert mix according to package directions; fold in almond extract. Fold dessert mix and gelatin mixture into egg whites just until blended.

Cut a 3-inch strip of foil to place around a 1-quart souffle dish and extend above dish 2 inches. Secure with a paper clip. Pour souffle mixture into dish. Refrigerate at least 6 hours. Carefully remove collar from souffle just before serving. Yield: about 12 servings.

Shrimp Casserole

(175 calories per serving)
1 package (10 ounces) frozen chopped broccoli

8 ounces uncooked shrimp
2 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt

¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ cup evaporated skim milk
½ cup (2 ounces) shredded Swiss cheese

2 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar

Place broccoli in 1½-quart glass casserole. Cover with casserole lid. Microwave on High for 5 to 6 minutes or until broccoli is thawed. Add shrimp and onion. Cover.

Microwave on High for 4 to 5 minutes or until shrimp is opaque and tender, stirring once. Let stand, covered. Combine flour, salt and mustard in 4-cup glass measure. Stir in milk. Microwave on High, uncovered for 2 to 3 minutes or until mixture boils and thickens, stirring 2 or 3 times. Stir in cheese. Beat in egg yolks one at a time. Set aside.

Beat egg whites with cream of tartar at high speed until mixture forms stiff, but not dry peaks. Fold cheese mixture carefully into egg whites until well combined. Drain broccoli and shrimp well; fold in egg mixture. Cover with waxed paper.

Microwave on Medium (50 percent) for 5 to 6 minutes or until center is almost set, rotating dish once. Yield: about 6 servings.

Cabbage Casserole

(140 calories per serving)
1 pound lean ground beef

1 small onion, chopped
1 medium carrot, shredded
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

4 cups shredded cabbage (about ½ medium head)

1 can (10½ ounces) condensed tomato soup

Chopped chives, if desired
Crumble ground beef into 1½-quart glass casserole. Add onion and carrot. Microwave on High, uncovered, 5 to 6 minutes or until cabbage is tender, stirring once or twice. Sprinkle with chives, if desired. Yield: about 8 servings.

Vegetable Saute
(20 calories per serving)
4 green onions, sliced
2 medium tomatoes, coarsely chopped

1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt

1 teaspoon cornstarch

1 teaspoon dried basil leaves

1 teaspoon dried parsley

1/8 teaspoon pepper

3 cups chopped zucchini (2 small)

Combine green onions, tomatoes, garlic, salt, cornstarch, basil leaves, parsley and pepper in 1-quart glass casserole; mix well. Stir in zucchini. Cover with casserole lid.

Microwave on High, uncovered, 5 to 6 minutes or until tender, stirring once. Yield: 8 servings.

Your Daily Diet Can Help Your Health
Heart disease, high blood pressure, even cancer are some of the health problems a person may avoid simply by eating a sensible diet. Yet most people don't know much more about "eating right" than they learned in their grade school health class. People are confused about nutrition. The messages are conflicting. Where can you go to learn how to sort the facts from the fads? The Red Cross can help.

The American Red Cross, in conjunction with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has spent four years devising and testing an adult-level course to teach people how to eat properly and prevent many common health problems. The new course, Better Eating for Better Health begins on Monday, July 27 at 10 a.m. at the Hancock County Extension Office, 725-A Dunbar Avenue, Bay St. Louis.

"Today's fitness boom and health consciousness has made people more aware of the importance of good nutrition," explains Darlene Underwood, the County Home Economist. "This new course gives people much more information about the connection between diet and such diseases as high blood pressure, heart disease and certain forms of cancer. The classes pack in quite a lot of really practical information and advice about how to control weight; how to reduce fat, sodium and sugar in one's diet; and how to decode food labels. Yet the classes keep things practical, so even busy people can still start eating right."

For more details, or to register for the course, contact Mrs. Underwood at 467-5456.

PAGEANT WINNER-Melissa Estapa, 3, daughter of Dave and Debbie Estapa, was crowned Princess in the recent Miss Hancock County Pageant. She was queen of the swimsuit division. Melissa is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Asher and Mrs. and Mrs. John Estapa, all of Bay St. Louis.

Beware

Vacation fraud by mail awaits unwary travelers

By Karen L. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

MISSISSIPPI STATE — Summer is almost here and school is out, so many families will be hitting the road for a vacation. Before making plans, be alert to vacation fraud.

Small post cards telling the receiver he has received a free vacation to Florida are making the rounds in the state. They promise a stay at different spots in Florida and an additional trip to the Bahamas. The trip includes up to "four people for a minimum of eight days and six nights." It doesn't include the travel to and from Florida.

"But nothing is ever really free," said Beverly Riggs, a family economics and management specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

When one travel company was called, the caller found that no attendance at sales presentations for land or condominiums is required but a one-time fee of $200 to $300 is required to join the company's travel club.

"Just think about it—a $200 to $300 fee can't begin to cover a vacation in Florida," Riggs said. "Consumers have a responsibility to think things through and find out if the offer is really that good."

The sales representative told the caller the purpose of the offer was to promote tourism in Florida, a state already popular with tourists.

"It's possible that when the travelers get to Florida the accommodations will not be as nice as promised or there will be no motel or hotel reservations as promised," Riggs said. "Or there will be additional fees before the vacation can begin."

It's always wise to check out a vacation offer before going, Riggs said to call the Better Business Bureau, chamber of commerce and the state consumer protection division of the attorney general's office in the state where the travel company is located. Ask if there have been any complaints about the travel company.

But this may not work if the travel company is new or has changed its name and started business again, she said.

If unwary consumers do sign up for vacations that turn out to be fraudulent, they may or may not get their money back, according to Jo Anne McLeod, the director of Mississippi's Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office.

"Reports of these vacations are rampant across the U.S.," she said.

McLeod said travel companies not telling the whole story is the biggest problem of the claims she handles. She cited the following examples of complaints she has received.

Consumers comply with the restrictions of hotels and dates but then have to pay a non-refundable fee to hold the reservation. Or the company calls a week before the vacation is to begin and reschedules it.

Or, one free airline ticket is included, but any additional tickets needed must be purchased at inflated prices through the travel company.

"Another common complaint is that the hotel cost is not included and the travelers must stay at a specified hotel at an inflated cost to take advantage of the vacation offer," McLeod said.

Sometimes accommodations near the beach turn out to be four or five miles away at a small motel that does not offer the amenities of a larger beachfront hotel.

Before going on the vacation, check the arrangements by asking the promoter for brochures about the hotel, according to the Federal Trade Commission. Call the hotel and check your reservation yourself.

If bonus coupons are part of the offer, ask if they have restrictions. Also find out what amount of your own money must be spent before using the bonus coupons.

"Taking a vacation from one of these mail offers is extremely risky," said John Frierson, a legal technician with the FTC regional office in Atlanta. "If you really want to take a trip to Florida use your own local travel agent."

Pets, people at risk

Warm weather brings ticks

By Eva Ann Dorris
Cooperative Extension Service
MISSISSIPPI STATE—Warm weather means more outdoor activities and more opportunities for pets and people to become hosts to ticks.

Ticks, a common pest in Mississippi, will feed on the blood of most warm-blooded animals, including people and are feared because of their ability to transmit Rocky Mountain Spotted Tick Fever, a disease dangerous to humans.

"It is easy for pets or people to pick ticks up in fields or wooded areas close to residential areas," said Dr. James Jarratt, an entomologist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"When in these areas, people should take precautions to protect themselves and pets from ticks," Jarratt said. "For people, tick repellents are available and just tucking pants into socks and shirts into pants protects most of your body."

The two ticks most frequently found on dogs are the American Dog Tick and the Brown Dog Tick. The American Dog Tick is an outdoor pest and the main carrier of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

The Brown Dog Tick is a house pest, which may live in the house, feeding almost exclusively on dogs.

According to Jarratt, the occurrence of ticks in the home or yard is always related to the presence of some warm-blooded animal.

"A mature female tick can drop from its host, and lay from 2,000 to 5,000 eggs," Jarratt said. "Even with a 50 percent hatch rate, this can leave a home or yard looking like it is covered with ticks."

Ticks are commonly found in great numbers on the sides of houses where pets usually stay near.

Jarratt said the type of vegetative cover near the home does not have a direct affect on tick population.

"The type of trees in your yard, whether they be pines or pecans, does not mean tick populations will be any worse than if you had another type of tree," Jarratt said.

The entomologist said for pet and human safety, controlling this pest is important. If ticks are a problem outside the home, in carports and yards, two spray applications with the chemical diazinon or chlorpyrifos should get the problem under control.

"Keep pets away from the sprayed area for 45 minutes and be sure water and feed bowls are not contaminated with the spray," he said.

If ticks are found inside the home, contact a professional exterminator.

"When you find a tick on a person or animal, remove it immediately," Jarratt said.

State appoints medical examiner

JACKSON—Dr. Steven T. Hayne, a board-certified pathologist/physician, has been appointed acting medical examiner for the State of Mississippi.

Hayne's appointment was announced Tuesday by James L. Roberts Jr., commissioner of public safety, under whose purview the medical examiner's office operates.

"Dr. Hayne is board-certified in clinical and anatomic pathology. He has an extensive performance record as a pathologist in the military and private sector, and has authored numerous articles on his research findings for nationally known and respected publications," Roberts said.

Hayne, 46, a native of California, moved to Mississippi from Florence, Ala., in January to work as a pathologist for Rankin General Hospital in Brandon. The base salary for the acting medical examiner is $65,000 annually.

Roberts said the decision to hire Hayne as the acting examiner was based on Hayne's credentials and the recommendation of a six-member advisory committee.

The Mississippi Coroners Reorganization Act of 1986 mandates that the state medical examiner be a board-certified forensic pathologist/physician appointed by the commissioner of public safety.

"The key word here is 'forensic' pathologist/physician. Hayne is a board-certified pathologist/physician who is capable of being a board-certified forensic pathologist/physician, which is the language used in an attorney general's opinion of September 1986 giving me the authority to hire a person with Hayne's qualifications as an interim medical examiner," Roberts explained.

"His appointment also has the blessings of the medical community," he said.

"Almost a year ago, I invited a group of representatives from the medical community to serve as an unofficial advisory committee to assist in stabilizing the medical examiner's office and to develop our death investigation system properly," Roberts said.

Serving on the advisory committee were Burke C. Murphy Jr., assistant executive director and legal counsel of the Mississippi State Medical Association; Dr. Alton B. Cobb, executive director of the Mississippi State Board of Health; Dr. Carl G. Evers, professor of pathology and associate dean of the University of Mississippi School of Medicine; Sam W. Cameron, executive director of the Mississippi Hospital Association; J. Ben Hunt, Pike County coroner medical examiner and president, Mississippi Coroners Association, and Capt. Paul W. Wells, legal/administrative assistant of the Department of Public Safety.

"I share the feelings of these professionals that Dr. Hayne is well-qualified to be our acting examiner," Roberts said.

"I have asked Dr. Hayne to reorganize the office in terms of administration and to provide all assistance needed to the county coroners/medical examiners, physicians, State Board of Health, and all others utilizing the office.

"I have instructed him to ensure the appointment and availability of as many deputies (certified pathologists) across the state as is possible to assist in autopsies. He is to promulgate rules and regulations for the entire death investigation system pursuant to recent legislation," Robert said.

"Dr. Hayne will have significant input into the country coroner/medical examiners certification school to be conducted next week by the staff of the Mississippi Crime Laboratory at the Mississippi Law Enforcement Officers' Training Academy in Rankin County," the commissioner said.

Hayne completed his undergraduate and graduate studies at Contra Costa City College in San Pablo, Calif., North Dakota State University in Fargo, N.D., the University of North Dakota School of Medicine in Grand Forks, N.D., and Brown University School of Medicine in Providence, R.I.

He interned at Letterman Army Medical Center in San Francisco, Calif., where he completed his residency requirements in the Medical Center's Department of Pathology from 1976 until 1980 when he became chief resident.

From 1980 until 1983 Hayne served as chief of the Department of Pathology at Munson Army Hospital in Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he also served as chief of Infectious Disease and director of Medical Education. For one year he served as chief of the Department of Pathology at Blanchfield Army Community Hospital in Fort Campbell, Ky.

Prior to moving to Mississippi, Hayne served at Shoals Medical Laboratory, Inc., in Sheffield, Ala.

He is licensed to practice medicine in Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama and has received board certification from the American Board of Pathology in Clinical and Anatomic Pathology.

Hayne is a member of the American Medical Association, Tennessee Medical Association, Association of Military Surgeons, Mississippi Medical Association, the College of American Pathologists, and the American Society of Clinical Microbiologists. He held the rank of major in the Medical Corps, USA.

Married to the former Ann Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bell of Gainesville, Fla., Hayne is the father of two children, Kaija, 8, and Erin, 10. His stepfather, Joseph P. Maldonado, resides in Washington, D.C.

For farm couples

Crisis retreats provide coping skills

By Eva Ann Dorris
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

As the farm crisis continues to take its toll on Mississippi farm couples, more and more of them are realizing a need for assistance, not just financial assistance, but help in coping with a way of life that is sometimes crumbling around them.

In response to this need, the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service and the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation are co-sponsoring weekend crisis retreats for farm couples.

The retreats are designed to address the needs farm couples have in dealing with the stress involved in a changing farm picture, said Dr.

Beverly Sandifer, a professional counseling psychologist from Hatfieldburg who leads the retreats.

"The retreats teach skills in dealing with the emotional processes that go along with stress, such as depression, grief and anger," Sandifer said. "Hopefully, from there the couples can move into acceptance and action."

The first retreat, held in March at Lake Tiak O'Khata in Louisville, involved 14 couples from throughout the state. During the retreat, the couples were given the opportunity to share private thoughts and emotions during both large and small group sessions.

"There is a lot of interaction during the retreat," Sandifer said.

"Couples exchange thoughts and emotions on a volunteer basis only and establish a network with couples who are experiencing some of the same things."

Another part of the retreat includes helping couples identify possible alternative income sources or for some, alternative occupations.

According to Sandifer, there are changes in the whole economic picture for farmers and these changes bring about many physical and emotional changes such as sleeplessness, irritability, changes in health and changes in family relationships.

Gulf/Caribbean fisheries expo planned

NEW ORLEANS — Commercial fishermen and representatives of allied industries throughout the Western Hemisphere will be invited to New Orleans March 3, 4, and 5, 1988, for the first Gulf/Caribbean Fisheries Expo.

The trade show will be held at The Rivage, located downtown next to the banks of the Mississippi River.

Sponsoring the first Gulf/Caribbean Fisheries Expo is H. L. Peace Expositions Inc., which also sponsors the successful 10-year-old International Work Boat Show. Its sister company, H. L. Peace Publications, publishes The Fish Boat, the only four-color national trade magazine for the commercial fishing industry.

Although the Gulf/Caribbean Fisheries Expo is new, it already is a tradition with fishermen in the region, having evolved as a show within a show.

Lacking their own trade show, they began attending the next best thing: The International Work Boat Show. As exhibitors grew aware of this interest, they added fishing-oriented displays.

Three years ago, the Work Boat Show instituted a program of educational seminars especially for commercial fishermen. These instructional and information sessions, featuring guest speakers from as far away as Alaska, proved a hit.

Now, H. L. Peace Expositions has responded to repeated requests from fishermen for their own show. Gulf/Caribbean Fisheries Expo will encompass not just fishing, but also processing and marketing aspects of the seafood industry. The popular educational program, organized by the Louisiana Sea Grant College Program, will continue.

The importance of the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean in world fishing is well-documented. Gulf and adjoining states account for better than one-third the value of all U.S. commercial landings of finfish and shellfish.

Six of the nation's top 10 fishing ports for landed value are on the Gulf Coast. Add Mexico, Central America and northern South American countries bordering the Caribbean, and you have one of the world's most prolific fisheries.

Judge Vlahos attends media/judiciary program

Senior Circuit Court Judge Kosta N. Vlahos, recently returned from Boston, after participating in the American Bar Association's "The First Amendment: A Media/Judiciary Dialogue."

Vlahos, along with other judges from throughout the U.S. participated in the program with representatives of national media.

Five workshops and a three-hour Socratic Dialogue, lead by Fred Friendly, the Edward R. Murrow Professor Emeritus at Columbia University School of Journalism,

The purpose of the session was to develop a better rapport between the judiciary and the media by frank and open discussions of their respective roles.

The highlight of the conference was the Socratic Dialogue. Its setting was Boston's Faneuil Hall built in 1747. "Just standing in the hall where our founding fathers formulated the plans which ultimately resulted in the American Revolution was an exciting experience," Vlahos said.

The dialogue dealt with "hard questions" involving privacy, the First Amendment and the accountability and responsibility of the media.

"It was a stimulating and rewarding experience; stimulating because of the incisive and thought-provoking questioning by Fred Friendly; and rewarding because the evils of arrogance and ego surfaced in only a few of the participants," the judge stated.

The session ended with closing remarks by Bill Monroe former narrator of NBC's "Meet the Press."

The program was sponsored by the National Conference of State Trial Judges, National Conference of Special Court Judges, National Conference of Lawyers and Representatives of the Media, Joint American Bar Association, American Newspaper Publishers Association Task Force, and National Judicial College.

*Consumption also upVariety of fruit on the increase

By Karen L. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

MISSISSIPPI STATE—Fruit lovers are increasing in number and so is the variety of fruit available.

Consumption is on the increase after a large decline in the past several years, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture data. The 1986 average of almost 214 pounds of fruit consumed by each American was three pounds higher than in 1985, and 14 pounds more than in 1982.

The trend toward healthier, lower fat diets has caused an increase in the consumption of fruit, said Melissa Mixon, a food and nutrition specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Consumption is also up for low-fat milk, fish, grain foods and soft drinks. Consumption is down for beef, pork and chicken, but up for them when used in casseroles, soups or other combination dishes.

"Consumers are eating more fruit for a better balanced diet, to increase variety or to substitute for desserts and candy," Mixon said.

There is also a greater variety of fruit available than previously because of quicker transportation and the trend of some traditional farmers to try different crops, among them blueberries, such as in Mississippi.

Some of these fruits may seem expensive compared to more familiar fruits, but it doesn't take a lot to add a tangy flavor to a meal, Mixon said. By using small amounts to add to meals, cooks can spark up routine meals.

Although it is impossible to quote prices statewide, Mixon said in general kiwifruit and plantain are low in cost, while apricots and persimmons are moderate cost and mangoes and papayas are more expensive.

The variety of ways to use the unusual fruits and all spring fruits is endless. Dress up meat dishes, make a fruit salad or fruit plate. Have fruit for dessert with a light whipped cream topping.

Use persimmons, mangoes and apricots in bread recipes. Substitute baked fruit as a vegetable dish. Beverages are also a refreshing way to use fruit.

Mixon provided the following recipes for new fruits featured in the grocery store.

SANDWICHES*WITH KIWIFRUIT

Cut off crusts from a variety of breads. Spread butter, margarine or mayonnaise on slices. Slice kiwi and put on top of ham, cream cheese with walnut bits, cheese with apples slices, turkey or cream cheese with orange slices.

KIWIFRUIT*TERIYAKI PORK

Place a loin of boneless pork on a rack in shallow pan. Rub with salt and pepper. Sprinkle on rosemary. Roast at 350°F for 2 to 2½ hours. Mix ½ cup each of ketchup and soy sauce, ¼ cup honey, 1 crushed garlic clove. Use as basting the last 45 minutes.

Transfer to a heated platter. Surround meat with kiwifruit slices and halves. Garnish with banana.

BAKED PAPAYA

1 ripe papaya
1 tablespoon butter
¾ teaspoon salt

2 tablespoons lemon juice

Pare and cut papaya lengthwise into six pieces, place in baking pan; sprinkle with salt and lemon juice and dot liberally with butter. Add enough water to cover bottom of pan to prevent burning. Decorate with honey or thin slices of lemon or kumquats. A sprinkle of pecan or chopped walnut meats is also tasty.

Bake at 350°F for about 25 minutes or until nicely brown. Serve immediately. Use in place of a vegetable or add whipped cream for a dessert.

HAWAIIAN FRUIT CUP

1 cup pineapple chunks
1 cup mango cubes
1 banana, sliced
1 cup orange juice
½ cup grated coconut
¼ cup guava jelly

Prepare fruit, mix with orange juice and chill. When ready to serve sprinkle with coconut and garnish with guava jelly.

FRIED PLANTAIN CHIPS

4 green plantains
Vegetable oil for frying
Salt

Peel plantains. Pour enough oil in a skillet, electric frypan or deep-fryer to measure 1 inch deep. With a vegetable parer, diagonally slice plantains paper thin. Drop plantain slices directly into hot oil. Fry a few at a time until crisp and brown, about 2 or 3 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and drain on paper towels. Sprinkle with salt. Makes 4 servings.

MANGO ORANGE COOLER

1½ cups ripe mango pulp (blender liquidized)

2 cups orange juice
2 tablespoons sugar

Combine all ingredients. Mix well in blender. Pour over crushed ice and serve.

PAPAYA SEED DRESSING

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt

1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup white wine or tarragon vinegar

1 cup salad oil
1 small onion, chopped

3 tablespoons fresh papaya seeds

Place all dry ingredients and vinegar in blender. Turn on blender, gradually add salad oil and onion. When thoroughly blended, add papaya seeds. Blend only until seeds are the size of coarse ground pepper. This dressing is excellent for fruit or tossed green salads. Makes 3 cups.

MANGO NUT BREAD

½ cup butter or vegetable shortening

¾ cup sugar
2 eggs

¾ cup raw mango, cut fine

2 cups sifted flour

1 teaspoon baking soda

1 tablespoon lime juice

¼ teaspoon salt

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs. Stir in dry ingredients, mango and lime juice. Mix all together. Add ½ cup chopped nuts. Bake in a loaf pan at 375°F for 1 hour. Do not cut until second day.

Teachers union endorses Molpus

The Mississippi Association of Educator-Political Council has recommended that Mississippi teachers support Dick Molpus for Secretary of State. Molpus received the MAE-PAC's approval based upon written response to a questionnaire, a personal interview and his record of service to public education, according to Peggy Peterson, newly elected president of the 13,000 member MAE.

"Molpus' strong and unflinching action on Sixteenth Section Land lease renegotiation has brought in desperately needed revenues for the school age children of our state," she added.

"His stand in seeing that this valuable resource was used for the schools rather than for political patronage was the key in MAE-PAC's recommendation for endorsing his candidacy for Secretary of State," she added.

When Molpus came into office, over one-third of all Sixteenth Section leases were for 20 cents per acre per year or less.

During the past three years, Molpus has insisted that school boards renegotiate those below market value leases. That insistence is paying off in millions of additional revenue for public schools.

Molpus also led the effort to reforest all idle Sixteenth Section timber lands, an effort which will generate millions in additional timber revenue as that timber matures to marketable size. In addition, Molpus' office proposed and passed successful legislation to increase lease terms to forty years on Sixteenth Section Land which will make that property more valuable.

In selecting Molpus, MAE described him as one of the foremost longtime advocates for public education in Mississippi.

Molpus was among the first public officials to pursue increased funding for textbooks, expanded compulsory attendance laws, and no pass/no play guidelines. Voicing concern over rising teacher shortages, Molpus has called for higher pay to attract and retain competent teachers.

Peterson concluded, "MAE and Molpus have pledged to work together to insure that the needs of districts, teachers and students are met. His support for our initiatives as well as his strong pursuit of full implementation of Sixteenth Section law has earned him an overwhelming approval from our membership. Molpus has earned an A+ from MAE members."

MAE-PAC is the political action arm of the Mississippi Association of Educators, the State's largest teacher organization.

The process which MAE-PAC uses in making the recommended endorsement includes: scrutiny of written questionnaires submitted by candidates; intensive personal interviews, which were conducted on June 8 and 9 of this year; and the results of scientific polling of MAE members. "MAE-PAC urges teachers throughout Mississippi to support the candidacy of Dick Molpus because of his strong commitment to public education," Peterson stated.

Animal art exhibitions opening at N.O. museum

Oriental animals, glass and bronze animals, and animals in photography will roam the galleries of the New Orleans Museum of Art from July through September.

Beginning July 15 and lasting through Sept. 30, NOMA will feature three in-house exhibitions of animals in art: "From the Permanent Collection: A Photographic Bestiary;" "A Glass Menagerie: Animals in Glass;" and "Auspicious Symbols: Animals of the Japanese Horoscope."

These exhibitions are a prelude to "Animals in Bronze: The Schmidgall Collection," which will feature over 150 animal sculptures including a Charles Russell never before exhibited in public.

The sculpture, "Buck Mule Deer," depicts the deer jumping over a log and was cast in sterling silver.

"Animals in Bronze" will be on view from Sept. 19 through Nov. 1.

Opening July 15:

A Glass Menagerie: Animals in Glass

People have always been fascinated with animals. Small sculptures of animals were some of the first art works crafted in prehistoric times. "Animals in Glass" will include creatures from the permanent collection and many borrowed from private collections in New Orleans which have never been on public view. Works from major American and European glass houses such as Steuben (New York) and Baccarat (Paris) will be included.

From the Permanent Collection: A Photographic Bestiary

Thirty photographs of animals by some of photography's best-loved masters. The exhibition will include: plates from Animal Locomotion by Eadweard Muybridge; Edward Weston's Targey the Cat, a pet of the artist; several photographs of cats by Brassai; Imogen Cunningham's Negative of a Snake; and Mr. and Mrs. Bosskamp with their Cats, a vintage photo-post card taken in 1928 by Andre Kertesz.

Auspicious Symbols: Animals of the Japanese Horoscope

In place of Western astrological symbols, the Japanese have 12 animals that govern their horoscope and calendar. The exhibition will encompass a variety of art forms: painting, ceramic, ivory carving and photography.
